Welcome.

The coronavirus (COVID-19) continues to wreak widespread economic turbulence both through its health and economic implications, as well as the near-constant changing status of the pandemic and states’ responses. Just two weeks ago, many states were either re-opened fully, or on a path to re-opening, and the small-business outlook was on the way to rebounding from historic lows in April.

This most recent COVID-19 survey from NSBA shows many indicators—including small-business confidence, economic outlook and overall impact of the pandemic—have improved in the last two months. NSBA has conducted its third COVID-19-related survey with the goal of providing the real-world implications of the pandemic and economic downturn and its likely long-term effects.

Among the key takeaways from this survey:

- Today, while the majority of small businesses (69 percent) say they are very concerned about the coronavirus, that number is down from 85 percent two months ago;
- Two-in-three small-businesses say they are still experiencing reduced customer demand, however that is down from 80 percent in April;
- Just one-third of small businesses are very confident they will fully recover from the pandemic and economic downturn;
- Eighty percent of respondents applied for some kind of federal lending program, and among those, 96 percent were approved for either an EIDL or PPP loan, or both;
- While more businesses have been approved in the last two months of the program, the length of time it took to receive funds has been significant: 85 percent say they waited more than 15 days between their submission and receiving funds;
- One-in-four small-business owners report they have not yet been able to fully re-staff their business; and
- Eighty-two percent of small businesses made workspace changes as a result of the pandemic, and the average initial set-up costs were $11,729 with ongoing monthly costs averaging around $1,800.

Small-business owners are inherently optimistic and confident in their ability to run their business, however economic insecurity can become an insurmountable hurdle for many. If small-business owners have little faith in the ability for our country to recover, the will be hesitant to grow, invest in their businesses and create jobs. Absent a clear path forward, we could see a notable reversal of the more positive small-business outlook we’re seeing now.

This survey was taken among 630 small-business owners June 16-23. Please contact our Media Affairs department with any media-related inquiries. Additionally, please visit NSBA’s resource page for updates, podcasts, small-business stories, Action Alerts and much more.

While the majority of small businesses (69 percent) said they were very concerned about the coronavirus overall, that number is actually down from 85 percent in April. Mirroring other indicators in this survey, there appears to be a slight softening to the negative outlook among small businesses in mid-June as compared to April.

In fact, for every indicator on this graph—health impact, economic impact and overall impact—small businesses indicated in June lower levels of significant worry than they expressed in April.

However, even though the levels of concern dropped from April to June, the concern levels in June were still higher than what was reported in March.
What is your biggest concern today with regards to COVID-19?

- Economic security: 30%
- Inability to fully recover my business: 20%
- Providing a safe and healthy workspace: 17%
- Another outbreak: 14%
- Employees/customers contracting COVID-19: 12%
- Financing my business: 7%

Have you had any cases of COVID-19 in your business? (check all that apply)

- Yes – I had/have it: 2%
- Yes – employees had/have it: 7%
- Yes – family members of employees had/have it: 9%
- No: 80%
- Not sure: 6%
In which of the following ways is your business currently being impacted?

- Reduced customer demand for my products/services: June 2020 - 64%, April 2020 - 49%, March 2020 - 80%
- Delays or closures in supply-chain: June 2020 - 36%, April 2020 - 41%, March 2020 - 33%
- Mandated business closure: June 2020 - 22%, April 2020 - 36%
- Increased employee absences: June 2020 - 14%, April 2020 - 19%, March 2020 - 20%
- Increased customer demand: June 2020 - 11%, April 2020 - 6%, March 2020 - 7%
- Other: June 2020 - 17%, April 2020 - 17%, March 2020 - 21%
- No major changes: June 2020 - 9%, April 2020 - 25%, March 2020 - 4%

Similar to other data points in this survey, mid-June found small-business owners experiencing less dramatic impacts on their business from the coronavirus than what was reported in April. That said, it is important to note that today, nine out of ten small businesses have experienced major changes in their business as a result of the pandemic.
Which of the following have you done and/or encountered as a result of the coronavirus?

- I have had events or conferences cancelled or changed: 52% (March 2020), 62% (June 2020), 56% (April 2020)
- I have cancelled or changed business travel plans: 44% (March 2020), 66% (June 2020), 67% (April 2020)
- I have had small-scale meetings cancelled or changed: 37% (March 2020), 54% (June 2020), 58% (April 2020)

Among those who reduced staff levels, 59 percent anticipate being fully staffed in the coming year.
Compared to two months ago, would you say the national economy is:

- Doing much better: 7% June 2020, 3% April 2020, 1% March 2020, 1% Jan. 2020
- Doing somewhat better: 32% June 2020, 30% April 2020, 19% March 2020, 1% Jan. 2020
- About the same: 32% June 2020, 32% April 2020, 20% March 2020, 3% Jan. 2020
- Doing somewhat worse: 22% June 2020, 11% April 2020, 12% March 2020, 3% Jan. 2020
- Doing much worse: 84% June 2020, 32% April 2020, 20% March 2020, 3% Jan. 2020

The total number of small-business owners expressing an overall “worse” outlook on the national economy today compared with two months ago is down to 42 percent today from 96 percent in April. However, when compared with January—before COVID-19 really hit the U.S.—when just 14 percent thought the economy was doing worse than before, it still appears relatively pessimistic.
Compared to six months ago, would you say the national economy is:

- Doing much better: 2%
- Doing somewhat better: 4%
- About the same: 5%
- Doing somewhat worse: 33%
- Doing much worse: 56%

Thinking about the next 12 months, do you anticipate:

- Economic expansion
- A flat economy
- A recession

From a financial perspective, how do you feel right now about the future of your business:

- Very confident
- Somewhat confident
- Not very confident
- Not at all confident

How concerned are you about a possible second-wave of COVID-19 and its long-term impact on your business?
